A vision for the future: Installation Management Community

Lt. Gen. Rick Lynch,
U.S. Army Installation Management Command

Like many others this time of year, I have been reflecting on the past 12 months and looking forward to the new year. In my professional capacity, I am focusing on the future of the Installation Management Community. Specifically, what should the Installation Management Community look like a year from now?

I have been asking this question of Installation Management personnel during meetings, town halls, and garrison visits. After all, the dedicated professionals at the garrisons and headquarters are doing the work on a daily basis; they know what it takes to deliver the facilities, programs and services that support our Soldiers and Families.

I have also been seeking feedback from Soldiers, Families and leaders through a number of avenues, including installation visits, the Family Forums at the Association of the United States Army annual conference, the Army Community Service focus groups I recently held, and the Army Family Survey. This feedback is critical because everything we do is focused on providing Soldiers and Families the programs, services and facilities that support their well-being, resilience and readiness. We need to know where we are on target and where we are missing the mark.

Please see DEFENDER 6, Page 3

One photographer does it all

If you are a Soldier stationed at Fort Wainwright, there is a good chance you've been to the photography studio. Whether it's a Department of the Army photo for your official records, a head-and-shoulders photo for pre-deployment or passports needed for family to travel to the next assignment, the photography studio located in Building 3025 provides official photographic needs for more than 6,000 Soldiers serving at Fort Wainwright.

Carol Holley, an employee with Salish and Kootenai Technologies, is the photographer, the receptionist and the technician working the one-person shop. Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security oversees the photo studio.

Holley has worked in graphics and photography for many years. Working at Fort Rucker, Ala. at the crafts shop, she found she didn't like the heat. After asking herself, "How far north can I get?" she decided on Alaska in 1978 to try it for a year. After finding she liked the "cooler" weather she decided to stay. She spent most of her time at Fort Greely before taking a job on Fort Wainwright. Having been at this job for more than four years she is happy with the work and the area.

A typical day starts early for Holley. Minutes ahead of their appointed times, Soldiers arrive with dress uniforms in hand and extra attention having been paid towards haircuts and appearance; they come prepared for a DA photo session, clean and sharp.

Remember, celebrate, act: A day on, not a day off

Staff report, Fort Wainwright PAO

Our nation will mark the occasion of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday Monday, which is now celebrated in all 50 states and over 100 countries.

The holiday is a chance to remember Dr. King who devoted his life's work to promote justice, equality and dignity for all humanity. The permanent theme of this holiday is "REMEMBER! CELEBRATE! ACT! - A DAY ON, NOT A DAY OFF." The theme serves as a reminder that the holiday is a day for service to the community, not just a day off from work or school.

Please see more about Dr. King on Page 7.

Note: All Family and Morale and Welfare facilities will be closed for the federal holiday Monday with the exception of the Physical Fitness Center, open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., the PFC Ice Rink, open 1:30 to 4 p.m. and the Warrior Zone, open 4 to 11:30 p.m.

On-post death reported

Staff report, USARAK PAO

Spc. Aaron M. Rentfrow, 30, remains in pre-trial confinement at the Fairbanks Correctional Center in connection with the death Sunday of his wife Tonya Lynn Rentfrow, 31, from Conway, Ark.

Sunday evening Spc. Rentfrow went to the Fairbanks Police Department and reported that his spouse was deceased at their residence on Fort Wainwright.

The Fairbanks Police Department notified the Military Police at Fort Wainwright who went to the home, found the body and notified the Alaska Field Office of the U. S. Army Criminal Investigation Division on post. That office investigates all on-post deaths.

The case is under investigation by the Criminal Investigation Command. Charges have not been made.

Spc. Rentfrow, 30, from Fort Wayne, Ind., joined the Army in November 2007 and served at Fort Sill, Okla.; White Sands Missile Range, N.M.; Fort Sam Houston, Texas and Fort Campbell, Ky. before his assignment as a mental health specialist with the U. S. Army Medical Department Activity-Alaska at Bassett Army Community Hospital in May 2010.

Spc. Rentfrow also served an earlier enlistment from February 1999 to September 2003.

472nd, serving country, community

Brian Schlumbohm, Fort Wainwright PAO

Soldiers of the 472nd Military Police Company, Arctic Military Police Battalion, were serving their country and their community Friday afternoon, Jan. 7. For the past few months, Soldiers in the unit had been donating and collecting food for the Fairbanks Food Bank. Having organized a large cache in one area of their building, a few Soldiers waited for the Food Bank truck to arrive to help in loading.

1st Lt. Andrew Widmeyer, an officer with the 472nd MP and coordinator of the food pickup said, "The community has always been very supportive of the Army here and we just wanted to do something to give back to the community." Widmeyer said, The support of commanders was an essential part of the unit's success and having 150-170 Soldiers participating, he was very pleased with the turnout and the quickness of the whole process. More than 1,100 pounds of non-perishables were collected.

"This is our second year conducting the 472nd food drive," Widmeyer said, and adding to the optimistic feeling of giving was a friendly competition that arose between the platoons. Each platoon's goal was to raise the most amount of food. This year the winner, with nearly 600 pounds collected, was the 3rd Platoon, and with the prestige of winning and good feelings came an extra day pass. With good intentions and not losing sight of the real reason for giving, Widmeyer said, "To give back to the community, to help out, to continue to do good things..." was the main intention behind the work. The companies are rewarded for doing good works and the Fairbanks community receives a large food donation.

Please see GIVING, Page 7

On Jan. 7, the 472nd Military Police Company, serving country and community, loaded donations of non-perishable foods gathered by the Soldiers over the past few months. Bound for the Food Bank at Fairbanks, the food will be distributed to individual families in need and the mission and soup kitchens where they will be used to feed those less fortunate. Jennifer Taylor, an employee of the Food Bank, was impressed with the over 1,100 lbs of dry goods the donation represented by the Soldiers, but also by the literal "army" of helpers she found present to load it all into the Food Bank truck. "We just wanted to do something to give back to the community," said 1st Lt. Andrew Widmeyer, an officer with the 472nd MP. (Photo by Brian Schlumbohm/Fort Wainwright PAO)

Col. Timothy A. Jones, Garrison commander

Fort Wainwright is new to the social media scene

We have hundreds of friends and a lot of people following us. We post our status and we tweet.

I'm talking about our Fort Wainwright Facebook and Twitter pages.

The sites offer a quick easy way to check out what's going on in our community. It took us a while to get here, but we are online to help you stay up-to-date on our events.

Our Public Affairs Office, Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation and our fire department all have Facebook pages. Our housing partner, North Haven Communities is live on Facebook. Several of our tactical units have Facebook pages. Many of you have individual pages on Facebook, Twitter, Flickr, LinkedIn and other sites.

Social media is the latest method of keeping in touch. You use it to share your news and photos with your loved ones in the Lower 48 and elsewhere. You use it to exchange comments on current events and to solicit solutions to problems you may be experiencing, ranging from potty training to recipes to the best place to buy a new major appliance or get your car repaired.

On our Public Affairs and DFMWR pages, you won't see a lot of information about our status or our opinions. What you will see are items of interest about what's going on here on Fort Wainwright and in the local community.

We post blurbs about the special events we're sponsoring – such as comedians, musicians, ethnic and cultural events and more. We notify you of deadlines to sign up for adult or youth sports activities. We let you know the dates, times and locations of seminars and workshops.

We enjoy sharing stories and photos that have been picked up by the U.S. Army website and other stories.

Friend, follow, retweet

On Flickr, we post photos of you working and playing here – living your everyday lives. You can download them to forward to your friends and families back home.

Look for video too. DFMWR is doing on-the-spot interviews at deployment fairs, art shows, BOSS events and more.

Have you found the Fort Wainwright fan page on Facebook? It's brand new. It's separate from the other personal Facebook pages such as the Public Affairs Office and fire department. So... we hope you'll like us.

We invite you to be our friend or to follow us. We welcome your comments and suggestions. We ask that when you post to either our pages or to your own that you keep operational security – or OPSEC – at the forefront of your mind. Don't post anything that might divulge sensitive information or give the enemy information they may not otherwise get.

Col. George Appenzeller, MEDDAC-AK commander

Happy New Year to the United States Army – Alaska community. I want to take this opportunity to provide a sincere thank you to the staff of the Alaska Post for providing support during this past year. Your community newspaper has facilitated information sharing and improved our ability to maintain open dialogue.

It has been a very busy year at Medical Department Activity-Alaska which included our successful completion of the joint commission recertification process. Our providers had over 234,737 patient encounters. We performed 1,440 surgeries, 310 surgical scopes, dispensed over 226,723 prescriptions, conducted 244,397 laboratory tests and drew over 23,650 samples. To top off the year, Bassett Army Community Hospital had the honor of delivering 686 babies into this world.

The administrative-support sections of our staff were just as busy. As an example, in just the last few months, our logistics medical materiel section issued over 19,000 seasonal flu doses from both DoD and state suppliers. The materiel section pulled and disbursed over 67,000 items with a dollar value that exceeded $13 million this year and supported multiple deployments and redeployments. To add to their Alaska uniqueness, the materiel section of logistics also continued to support a large federally funded native clinic, the Chief Andrew Isaac Clinic in Fairbanks and 33 geographically separated villages throughout Alaska. The facilities branch within the logistics division skillfully completed 22 facility projects at a cost of over $7.8 million to further upgrade one of the Army's newest hospitals. Some of the major projects included a $2.8 million security card swipe system that vastly improved security and fire safety throughout the building a-green-project that replaced all of the light switches with sensors to turn off the lights when not in use. The organization was able to successfully install and operate a $3.4 million MRI in August.

MEDDAC-AK was also honored this year to host a number of distinguished visitors and was the site of the 2010 Western Regional Medical Command - Top Medic Team Competition.

Those at MEDDAC-AK were not the only ones responsible for us meeting our healthcare mission in 2010. You, our healthcare partners, taking an active role in your care contributed to our success. Making the time to cancel appointments through Tricare online or calling 361-4000 allowed us to utilize these slots to serve other beneficiaries. We ask for your support in continuing to notify us when you must cancel an appointment so we can continue to maximize everyone's access to care.

Many of you also took the time to let us know how we are doing and ask questions about our operations. The Army Provider Level Satisfaction Survey is an invaluable tool that allows you, the patient, to communicate with the MEDDAC-AK leadership about the quality of care, what we are doing well and where we can improve.

Additional ways to provide feedback include emailing questions directly to akmedpao@amedd.army.mil along with taking time to utilize the comment

cards and boxes located

throughout many MEDDAC-

AK facilities. These cards are regularly collected,

You may also submit concerns or compliments through the Interactive Customer Evaluation or

"ICE" system. Each ICE submission is acted upon and reviewed by me as well. Please remember to add your contact information if you would like a personal response to your submission.

Finally, Patient Advocates are also available to assist patients who have compliments or concerns.

They are located on the first floor of BACH across from the Tricare office and can be reached at 361-

I encourage you to engage us through any of these options and to increase your options to access care

DEFENDER 6: Building a shared vision for Installation Management Command

I urge everyone -- Installation Management personnel, Soldiers, Family members, leaders -- to continue to send me solid ideas that help answer the three fundamental questions: Are we doing the right things? Are we doing things right? What are we missing?

The point of asking for input from so many different people is to build a shared vision of where we are going in the next year. I am meeting with senior Installation Management Community leaders this month to develop that vision based on all of this input. The shared vision will enable us to begin with the end in mind. Once we have a shared vision of what right looks like, we can figure out how to get there from here. We can eliminate random activities and focus all our efforts on the initiatives that will have the greatest impact on Soldiers, Civilians and Family members.

We started 2010 by producing version one of the Installation Management Community's Campaign Plan. The Campaign Plan laid out a vision, strategy and way ahead for providing the programs, services and facilities that support Soldiers and Families. With the Campaign Plan and the three fundamental questions as our guides, we have continually challenged ourselves to improve our performance.

Some of our efforts are visible to those we serve. For example, based on feedback from Soldiers and Families, we have enhanced delivery of several vital programs, including the Exceptional Family Member Program, Survivor Outreach Services, the Total Army Sponsorship Program, the Army Substance Abuse Program and the Army Continuing Education System.

Many of our efforts will not be immediately apparent to those outside of our workforce. For example, we are reducing the number of administrative regions from six to four and integrating the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command into IMCOM Headquarters. Soldiers and Families will see no difference in the quality of support or number of services they receive, but behind the scenes, we will be working smarter. We will streamline delivery of services to our customers and generate savings that can be applied to Soldier and Family programs.

Now, as we build a shared vision of what the Installation Management Community should look like in November 2011 and lay out the plan to achieve that vision, we will continue to challenge ourselves to go beyond what we already know and are comfortable with. We will continue to look at the shape and size of our organization and workforce. We will continue to reach out and build relationships with others committed to supporting Soldiers and Families, including universities, businesses, non-government organizations, and other government agencies. We will continue to identify, develop and align the resources, policies and processes needed to support Family programs, safety, sustainability, energy security and other priorities.

The process of developing a shared vision can be difficult for some, since it carries the possibility of change, but it can also be energizing, and it is important for us to do if we take our jobs seriously. For one, we owe it to our fellow citizens to be good stewards of all the resources entrusted to us. We always have to be mindful of how we impact the environment, how we treat our people and how we spend taxpayer dollars. If we do our job well, if we are good stewards of the resources entrusted to us today, then we will have the resources we need in the future.

An even more important reason is the Soldiers and Families we support. We are committed to providing a strong, supportive environment in which they can thrive. We do not chase change for change's sake, but if the only reason we do something is because we have always done it that way, then we can do better. We owe it to our Soldiers and Families to ask what right looks like and to make sure we are on track to get there.

Tax center provides assistance to Soldiers

Jim Wherry, chief of Legal Assistance, Fort Wainwright

The Fort Wainwright tax center will officially open Wednesday, the same day the Defense Finance and Accounting Service estimates active-duty Soldiers will receive their W-2s online in their MyPay accounts. The center will remain open through the end of the tax season, April 18.

Last year the tax center filed more than 1,200 tax returns and saved Soldiers, retirees and their families more than $400,000 of tax preparation fees and helped them recover nearly $4 million in tax refunds.

"Quality is our number one mission," said Staff Sgt. Troy Gibson, the incoming noncommissioned officer of the tax center. "Each tax preparer receives online training from the Internal Revenue Service and then must attend a school in person and is taught and trained by tax preparers with decades of experience. When Fort Wainwright tax Soldiers prepare a return, all returns are meticulously checked and a quality review is done by a second preparer, unlike many private tax-preparation services off post."

Also unique to Fort Wainwright, each tax return is checked by one of the legal-assistance attorneys at the post prior to filing. Jim Wherry, the chief of Legal Assistance, has been preparing taxes with the military for more than 10 years, both overseas and in the United States. As a result of all of this hard work, the Fort Wainwright tax center has consistently had one of the highest quality return rates as assessed by the Internal Revenue Service's Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program.

The tax center assists Soldiers with complicated tax filing including income from rental properties, the sale of stocks and bonds and taxation on the Alaska Permanent Fund Dividend. The tax center can also assist with preparing back taxes for those servicemembers who missed previous years due to deployment. Taxpayers who fail to file will lose any refund they might have had after three years, so it pays to file taxes. It's a headache you can let someone else help with.

The tax service is free and open to servicemembers of all branches, military retirees and their dependents. Elderly civilians and others may receive help off post at one of the many VITA sites being set up by the IRS across Fairbanks.

The tax center will be located in Building 1049, Unit 2. The office is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m., Thursday, noon to 7 p.m.

The tax center will also be open for its annual "Taxapalooza" from Wednesday through Jan. 21. The center will be open at that time for anyone with their W-2s and a relatively simple 1040 to prepare.

Servicemembers can also get help online to prepare taxes by going to www.militaryonesource.com. A free program for tax preparation and filing is posted there.

M-ATV undergoes rigorous cold weather testing in Alaska

Clara Zachgo, Cold Regions Test Center

A large flatbed truck arrived at the U.S. Army Cold Regions Test Center in late September with a 12.5-ton vehicle covered in ice and dirt chained to it. The Military's new Mine-Resistant Ambush-Protected All-Terrain Vehicle arrived to undergo its first round of cold-weather testing. This vehicle has seen exhaustive testing over the past couple of years in Maryland and Arizona, but had yet to see extensive testing in the natural cold environment.

The M-ATV was designed after an urgent request was placed for a vehicle capable of maneuvering the mountainous terrain, rock and dirt roads and narrow village streets of Afghanistan and also capable of providing the added protection the MRAP vehicles have against Improvised Explosive Devices. The result is Oshkosh Corporation's M-ATV. It has the same v-shaped hull as all other MRAP variants to deflect IED blasts away from the Soldiers, but incorporates an independent suspension system. It is also about half the size, making it better suited for the underdeveloped roads and mountainous terrain in Afghanistan. Because of the urgent need to protect our warfighters, the M-ATV was fielded immediately. The design, production, testing and delivery of the vehicle occurred all within a year of receiving the request.

With the focus of the war having shifted to Afghanistan, the relevancy of CRTC's mission has become crucial. CRTC tests the equipment being fielded to our Soldiers in an environment similar to that in theatre. Average winter temperatures in Afghanistan are below freezing and CRTC's testing helps to identify how systems will perform in those cold temperatures. The issues identified during testing allow better products and more knowledge of system performance being delivered to our Soldiers. For test officer Richard Reiser, "One of the more satisfying aspects of our work is the relevancy; to know that Soldiers in current theaters of operation are benefitting from information we provided very recently is an incentive to get out in the cold and keep testing".

In addition, Soldiers from the 6th Engineer Battalion, United States Army Alaska are serving as test participants. Having Soldier participation is beneficial for both CRTC and the Soldiers. CRTC gains the perspective and knowledge of the individuals who will actually be using the M-ATVs. The Soldiers and their unit gain familiarity with the equipment already in theater of operations and training on individual and unit-specific tasks.

During the next several months, Reiser will put the M-ATV through rigorous testing in the cold. During the first few months of testing the temperatures have already dropped to well below 40 below zero, providing ideal conditions for the planned cold-weather endurance testing. "We find that many of the challenges presented when operating in a cold regions environment such as temperature extremes, ever-changing road surfaces and even maintenance difficulties are increased. Our efforts help inform the acquisition decision-makers of these difficulties and provide suggestions for those challenges. These decision-makers are then able to make more informed decisions regarding the best path forward." At the end of the winter test season, CRTC will be able to provide Joint Program Management Office MRAP and system evaluators extensive information on the performance of the M-ATV in the cold environment.

After the preliminaries of paperwork and disappearing into a changing room, a Soldier emerges in full attire except for hat and shoes. Looking over his uniform in different lighting, Chief Warrant Officer 2 Jarrad Walter, a pilot with the 6th Squadron, 17th Cavalry Regiment, 16th Combat Aviation Brigade, begins checking over his uniform, preparing to have his first DA photo taken since his last promotion. "I recently became a warrant officer and my last one was as enlisted," he said. "I wanted to make sure my records were up-to-date in case they were reviewed for any reason."

Holley takes time with each Soldier to make sure they get the best possible photo. She helps by giving the customer a visual check-over, making sure the uniform is clean and worn properly. She also keeps a book of regulations open on a nearby desk for Soldiers to use if there are any doubts.

After the once-over is accomplished, Holley takes the customer into the studio and prepares him or her for the photo. Making sure all looks well, she positions him or her for the photograph and takes her place behind the camera. A toy monkey sits atop of the studio's camera stand staring down toward the subject. It goes by the name "Monkey" she explains. It doesn't have a story other than helping out occasionally during passport shoots with little kids and frowning Soldiers. "It makes me feel like a Sears photographer," she says jokingly.

After the photos are taken, she and the customer view them on a large screen and they discuss which photo to go with. After some information is taken down, the Soldier's job is finished.

Holley saves the image to a database to be worked with later and ultimately submitted to the Department of the Army Photo Management Information System. "The photos become a part of their permanent official records," Holley explained. Being an official document, there are rules and regulations governing its handling. It must be taken at an authorized photographic facility or a commercial contract facility. The DA photo follows a Soldier throughout his or her career. As new ranks and achievements are gained by the individual it is important to keep photos updated. DA photos are used by boards for promotions, professional development education, active federal extensions, unit vacancy promotions, command selections, command sergeants major and other special recognition boards.

The importance placed on these photos comes through in the products Holley produces and in the professionalism, care and help Carol Holley shows the Soldiers in her studio. As an "official document" the DA photograph can speak volumes about the Soldier and the photographer. Check and see if your DA photos are up-to-date at: <https://www.isdrad16.army.mil/dapmis/ImageAcceptProlog.do>

If not, call Carol Holley at 361-6268 for an appointment.

Alaska Post spotlight on Youth Sports Director

Trish Muntean, Fort Wainwright PAO

Young people enrolled in the Child, Youth School Services may find it challenging to keep up with their new Youth Sports Director Matthew Sagartz. He came from Fort Lewis, Wash., just a short time ago and hit the ground running.

Sagartz grew up in a small, rural town in Kansas. "Every summer we would work in the garden; split firewood and hunt pheasants in the fall; hunt deer in the winter and burn pastures and work cattle in the spring," he said.

He was fascinated with the Benedictine monastery in his community and at one time wanted to be a monk. "The Rule of St. Benedict emphasizes the importance of living by the work of your hand; to me there's a meditative quality when you work hard, there is something very profound in manual labor."

Sagartz has come a long way since leaving the Midwest. He has visited at least 15 countries, at one point studying archaeology in Australia while working as an immigrant worker, traveling the country in an old van.

He met his wife Molly in Germany and proposed to her on top of the Eiffel Tower in Paris at sunset. She wears a gold Eiffel Tower necklace to commemorate the event.

He came to Alaska after he and his father-in-law went on a king salmon fishing trip to Sitka, Alaska, last summer and said he fell in love with the state.

For Sagartz "fishing is my passion, it goes beyond a hobby. I honestly think I was a fisherman in a previous life, there's something so perfect about it," Sagartz said. "I've fished in 11 different countries and the most incredible fishing I've ever done is in Alaska. I can't wait until summer when the salmon start running again. What an amazing fish."

A few weeks ago he went ice-fishing for the first time. Sagartz says that next time he wants someone to go with him just to tend to the fire. "I'm never using wood pellets again for heat. I lost more fish than I caught, it was 35-below and I was constantly messing with the stove, dumping in more wood pellets for heat and rearranging my seat to be closer to the stove."

Sagartz would like to share his enthusiasm of fishing and other outdoor activities with patrons of the Youth Services program. "My goal is to provide variety in our programming and introduce the military youth to unique sports experiences that are specific to Alaska," said Sagartz.

"His eager attitude to bring youth sports into the new generation impressed the interview team," said MJ Lohrenz, director of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "We do a pretty good job of trying to introduce the adults that come to Fort Wainwright on the "Alaska adventure" and Matt wants to give the youth that opportunity also," she said.

"I have the most amazing job in the world and get paid to do it. Sports and Fitness teaches kids that in order to become good at something, they must work toward their goals," Sagartz said. "This is a very valuable lesson, one that they must carry with them into their adult lives. Sports also teach children that when they do not succeed, such as losing a game, that they must deal with defeat, and move on with dignity."

Sagartz is quick to point out that he is just part of the team. He says that he would "be lost without" Lindsey Cox, the assistant youth sports director.

"We want to provide an exceptional experience and superior customer service that our families will always remember," Sagartz said.

East edges West in Army-sponsored 'All-American' Bowl contest

S.L. Standifird, Joint Hometown News Service

The longest running high school all-star game in the nation was played out in front of a nationally televised audience on Saturday, when the U.S. Army-sponsored All-American Bowl kicked off at the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas.

In an East versus West match-up, the East edged out the West team 13 to 10 in front of a record crowd of 37,893.

Recognized as the Army's premiere recruiting activity, the annual U.S. Army All-American Bowl game began with a mix of future, current, and past heroes in Army combat uniforms, alongside the nation's most talented high school football players.

The Director for Communications, Marketing and Outreach for the U.S. Army Accessions Command, Col. Derrick Crotts, said that this entire event is about more than just football.

"This game represents everything that is great about America," he said. "It represents the best athletes in America, it represents the best bandsmen in America, and it represents the best Soldiers that this nation has to offer."

All of the activities leading up to the football game were a way to honor the Soldiers of the Year, wounded warriors from the Center for the Intrepid and Soldier-heroes. The Soldier heroes are recipients of the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal with device for valor, or the Purple Heart for actions in either Iraq or Afghanistan.

The first event of the week for the players and soldiers was a Punt, Pass, and Kick team competition. Each team included a mix of players, the Soldiers of the Year, and wounded warriors. The players and Soldier-heroes were first introduced at an East versus West soldier skills challenge that pitted teams in eating, push-up and sit-up events. The East team won this friendly competition.

From there, the players and soldier-heroes were paired up for the remainder of the week. One player was honored to be with these Soldiers, calling them true heroes.

"With the Army, it is a lot of fun getting to spend time with real life heroes that are actually out there saving our lives and giving us freedom," said Juda Parker, a player for the West team from Hawaii. "Just coming and spending time with them and playing football means a lot to me, and I know it means a lot to them."

Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Jeremy Hancock, civil affairs non commissioned officer, and one of the Soldier-heroes honored during the week, returned the sentiments about the players.

"I have been incredibly impressed by the character and drive these young athletes demonstrate, they are humble and goal oriented and motivated to accomplish their dreams," said Hancock. "It's evident they have a gift and through great coaching and parenting and hard work, it has been developed to a standard of excellence that will carry them far in this sport, and their lives."

The players and Soldier-heroes continued to interact during media events, barbecues, and formal dinners in their honor.

For the Soldier-heroes, the experience was a way for them to be publicly recognized for their service to country.

"It has been a true honor to represent the U.S. Army and to show the general public that we truly care about our community," said Sgt. 1st Class Charles R. Reeves, recruiter. "It is also an honor and a privilege to interact and mentor these great All-Americans."

Overall, the Army was able to accomplish what it set out to do. They were able to show the American public what the Army is all about.

"We get 4.9 million viewers of the game, more than 30,000 attending, so we take someone who knows a little about the Army and make them more knowledgeable with this event," said Lt. Gen. Benjamin C. Freakley, commanding general, U. S. Army Accessions Command.

Commander's Cup stays at home

Fort Wainwright's Grizzlies (red), were so evenly matched against the Iceman team from Eielson Air Force Base that each and every shot scored by the U.S. Army Alaska Grizzlies ice hockey team was answered within minutes by the 354th Fighter Wing's Iceman team. The annual, friendly, frenetic, and at times, fierce, match at the Physical Fitness Center Ice Rink, between the Interior Alaska Army and Air Force installations went back-and-forth after the Grizzlies scored in the first three minutes, answered by an Iceman goal several minutes later. The 15th annual Commander's Cup Championship hockey game was forced into a shoot-out when neither team capitalized on a five-minute overtime Sunday evening; the score was 3-all. During the shootout, teams alternate sending a single player on the ice to try to slip the biscuit past the goalie. Three was the magic number in the shootout as well, but by then the offensive balance had tipped toward the Army's team, and the Grizzlies' puck shooters slipped three goals past the Iceman goalie, leaving the airmen scoreless in the shootout and guaranteeing another year at home for the commander's cup, proudly maintained by Fort Wainwright. Nearly all players on the Grizzlies were from the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division and the 16th Combat Aviation Brigade, according to team captain, Michael Manner. With impending deployments, the teams had to forego playing the 2011 commander's cup game in the Fairbanks Big Dipper arena during hockey appreciation week in February. Musician, storyteller visits Wainwright

Sheryl Nix, Fort Wainwright PAO

Dan Meyers, Christian musician, storyteller and self-proclaimed lover-of-adventure, came to Fort Wainwright this week to share his music and insights with Soldiers and families in a variety of forums.

Meyers performed during Sunday's chapel service at the Northern Lights Religious Education Center, spent time with youth from the chapel and then gave a community concert Monday. He also gave an intimate, in-home concert for Soldiers and families Tuesday.

He and his wife Julie worked with Wainwright chaplains on a Strong Bonds marriage retreat at Chena Hot Springs this week and will also work with single airmen from Eielson Air Force Base in a retreat this weekend before leaving for the western Alaskan Bush. There they will work with Alaska Natives through Send International, an evangelical Christian organization designed to start churches and work with people in remote areas of the world.

The reasons behind his visit to Fort Wainwright are simple, he said. He loves God and loves Soldiers and wants to encourage them. "The first thing I want to say is 'thank you for your service,'" he said.

Meyers, the son of a Marine, planned to enter the military until God intervened and turned his focus to music and full-time ministry during his senior year at the Citadel in Charleston, S.C., he said.

Although he did not join the military, his passion for those who serve and desire for a life of adventure continue to be strong. "I wanted to bring encouragement and spiritual challenge to these unique communities that are filled with people who feel lonely, isolated and far from home, and my wish was granted," he said in his biography. Words," "Horizon Line," "Ordinary Man" and "Stutterin'" tell the stories of people searching for truth, significance and hope through a relationship with God in an era filled with distractions and even tragedies like 9/11.

In light of serious problems like suicide, drug use and other issues that can surface in military communities, Meyers said he wants to offer hope and encouragement through his music and interactions with Soldiers and families during his visits to military installations. "In a world that seems hopeless, sometimes we can strive for perfect results and sometimes we might even find a little success in the world," he said. "My hope is to be an ambassador for the true (hope) and point to Christ who is the answer."

This visit was his first to Fort Wainwright but he has come to Alaska numerous times to perform and serve. Through his Pilgrim Road Ministries he will begin his 20th European military tour and release his seventh CD this summer. The next adventure for Meyers and his wife will take them to northern Iraq to begin teaching and working with Kurdish schools and communities there. "I decided early in my career that I was going to seek out adventure both on the road and off," he said. "What I've learned is that I don't have to look very far."

Martin Luther King, Jr., was born Michael Luther King Jr., but later had his name changed to Martin. Martin Luther attended segregated public schools in Georgia, graduating from high school at the age of 15; he received the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1948 from Morehouse College, a distinguished Negro institution in Atlanta from which both his father and grandfather had graduated. After three years of theological study at Crozer Theological Seminary in Pennsylvania where he was elected president of a predominantly white senior class, he was awarded the Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1951. With a fellowship won at Crozer, he enrolled in graduate studies at Boston University, completing his residence for the doctorate in 1953 and receiving the degree in 1955. In Boston he met and married Coretta Scott, a young woman of uncommon intellectual and artistic attainments. Two sons and two daughters were born into the family. In 1957 he was elected president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, an organization formed to provide new leadership for the now burgeoning civil rights movement. The ideals for this organization he took from Christianity; its operational techniques from Gandhi. In the 11-year period between 1957 and 1968, King traveled over six million miles and spoke over 2,500 times, appearing wherever there was injustice, protest and action; and meanwhile he wrote five books as well as numerous articles. In these years, he led a massive protest in Birmingham, Ala, that caught the attention of the entire world, providing what he called a coalition of conscience, and inspiring his "Letter from a Birmingham Jail", a manifesto of the Negro revolution. He planned the drives in Alabama for the registration of Negroes as voters; he directed the peaceful march on Washington, D.C., of 250,000 people to whom he delivered his address, "I Have a Dream." He conferred with President John F. Kennedy and campaigned for President Lyndon B. Johnson; he was arrested upwards of 20 times and assaulted at least four times; he was awarded five honorary degrees; was named Man of the Year by Time magazine in 1963; and became not only the symbolic leader of American blacks but also a world figure. At the age of 35, Martin Luther King Jr., was the youngest man to have received the Nobel Peace Prize. When notified of his selection, he announced that he would turn over the prize money of $54,123 to the furtherance of the civil rights movement. On the evening of Apr. 4, 1968, while standing on the balcony of his motel room in Memphis, Tenn., where he was to lead a protest march in sympathy with striking garbage workers of that city, he was assassinated. GIVING: MPs donate time, food to the community

Jennifer Taylor, a worker with the Food Bank, was not only impressed with the amount of food that was donated, but equally delighted with the literal, "army" of helpers to help load it all. In most cases Taylor arrives at a pickup location and is the main "loader" of all the goods. As Soldiers loaded the large packages onto the truck, Taylor explained that "the big bags of rice would be split up into individual packages and put out in boxes to the families we support." Bulk items will be sent to soup kitchens and the missions, but "The primary place that it goes out to first are out to the individual families we make food boxes for," said Taylor.

This community effort within the 472nd is only a small part of how the Soldiers affect the local community. Widmeyer explained, "We have plenty of Soldiers who do volunteer work." From volunteering with the Boy Scouts, being ski patrollers and even volunteer firemen, Soldiers find ways within the community to use skills taught to them by the Army. "We're Army, but we're also husbands, wives, sons and daughters, members of the community," Widmeyer said.

Looking ahead to exceed this year's food drive total, Widmeyer would like to see if a battalion-wide event might be possible. A little friendly competition between Fort Wainwright's 472nd MPs and Joint Base Elmendorf Richardson's 164th Military Police Company, Arctic Military Police Battalion would benefit both the Fairbanks and Anchorage communities.

Forces target Taliban, Haqqani Network leaders

ISAF Joint Command, Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan, Jan. 10, 2011 -- Afghan and coalition forces targeted Taliban and Haqqani Network leaders for their involvement in attacks against Afghan and coalition forces, detaining several suspected insurgents in Kunduz, Logar and Kandahar provinces yesterday.

In Kunduz, Afghan and coalition forces targeted a Taliban facilitator during a security operation, detaining two suspected insurgents.

The targeted Taliban facilitator is responsible for the distribution and use of improvised explosive devices and suicide vehicle-borne IEDs in the province. He is directly associated with the Kunduz Taliban shadow governor and deputy shadow governor and maintains contact with other Taliban insurgents throughout Afghanistan.

A joint security force followed intelligence reports to the targeted compound in the district. Afghan forces called for all occupants to exit the buildings peacefully before the joint security force cleared and secured the buildings. After initial questioning at the scene, the security force detained the suspected insurgents.

Security forces continued to pursue the targeted insurgent for his involvement in the Dec. 19 attack against an Afghan National Security Force recruiting center in Kunduz City, which resulted in eight Afghan National Security Force deaths.

In Logar province, Afghan and coalition forces targeted a Haqqani Network insurgent who facilitates weapons into Charkh district for insurgent attacks on coalition forces, detaining one suspected insurgent during a security operation.

The targeted Haqqani Network facilitator is based in Pakiya and Khost provinces. Recent reporting indicates he provided weapons for attacks with other Haqqani Network insurgents in the district.

Security forces followed leads to the target location in the district, where Afghan forces called for all occupants to exit the buildings peacefully before conducting a search. One suspected insurgent was detained after initial questioning at the scene.

In Kandahar province, Afghan and coalition forces conducted a deliberate clearance of Taliban leaders in the Daman district, detaining two suspected insurgents during a security operation.

The security force targeted Taliban leaders who operate within Kandahar province, in an effort to deny them freedom of movement and safe havens in the province.

Security forces followed leads to the target location in the district, where Afghan forces called for all occupants to exit the buildings peacefully before conducting a search. Two suspected insurgent was detained after initial questioning at the scene.

The security force conducted these operations without firing their weapons and no women or children were injured or detained.
